Teaching Kids to Care for Creation: An Interactive, Christian-Based Curriculum

About Randy K. Hammer

Teaching Kids to Care for Creation is an interactive, Christian-based group resource that is for elementary school-aged children. It was created by Randy K. Hammer and Kristin Hammer to help children understand that we can live together in balance and peace with other living things and that we can do so by understanding our roles in creation.

Each lesson in the curriculum focuses on a different animal, and the lessons are designed to tie in with what the children have already experienced. In running workshops so they can tie in to what the children have already experienced, it is important to teach them that we can live together in balance and peace with other living things and that we can do so by understanding our roles in creation.

The misuse of creation begins when we no longer recognize any higher power. It is a way of loving, of moving gradually away from what I want to what Gods world needs with great uncertainty for their future and that of their children. Why Catholics Care for Creation - Squid Ink Books 8 Feb 2012.

Encyclical Letter Laudato si of the Holy Father Francis on care for our common home.

Let the Children Give, Time, Talents, Love, and Money by Delia Halverson.

“Humans are made in the image and likeness of God. We are created to work the earth and to care for all creation. It is our responsibility to work for the benefit of all creation, not just for ourselves.”

“God’s world needs us now more than ever. We must work together to protect creation and to ensure that all children have access to clean water.”
